Samsung AK59-00141A is full functioning or a universal remote control for running various devices, and you can program the remote control to operate most popular brands of audio/video equipment like TV, DVD player (or VCR), or satellite receiver network. See Programming for other hardware on this remote may have features not used by your receiver. This guide makes it easy to set up and use the remote control this guide contains detailed information to help you get the most out of the remote control, including controlling other equipment like TVs, VCRs and DVD players. If you press a power button pointing to your device, if it's off, it's already programmed and doesn't need further programming. If the device does not respond check the battery in the remote control it may be that the batteries are exhausted. Use the remote mode buttons to set the remote control in the right mode for the hardware. Be sure to program the remote control to work with other equipment, as described in the manual. To change the mode, click for the equipment you want to control. The mode button lights up for three seconds to show that you've installed a remote control in this mode. Depending on how the remote control is configured, the remote control can use UHF radio signals, infrared signals or both to control the receiver. However, only IR signals are used to control other equipment. IR signals travel for short distances, usually 20 feet or 7 meters they can walk up to 40 feet, and cannot pass through walls or other solid objects. Bring the remote control directly to the equipment you want to control, without objects to block the signal path. This guide shows you how to program the remote control for the TV. The next section uses a different method of the remote control program for the work of the TV or other equipment (e.g. DVD player or VCR, tuner, amplifier, audio receiver or second TV). You can program the remote control by following programming instructions using remote hardware code tables, or procedures for scanning hardware codes. When programming a remote control for combined equipment such as a TV/DVD or a TV/video recorder, it programs the remote control in one mode and then repeats the procedure in another mode. For example, program the remote to work DVD player using code 765, follow the instructions on the TV remote control program using the codes, and then repeat the instructions for the DVD using the same code. Put the remote control into TV mode to use THE functions of the TV, or DVD mode to use the functions of the DVD player (or VCR). If the remote control doesn't work your Blu-ray player, try this: Replace the battery with a new Reset remote remote reset to remove the battery and then hold the POWER button on the remote control for 30 seconds. Replace batteries with new batteries and make sure they match the symbols. Try working the Blu-ray player again. Check remote to test the remote control, you will need a digital camera or mobile phone that has a camera. Turn on the digital camera or activate the camera function on your mobile phone. Put the remote control on the camera, then press and hold the power button (or channel, volume, buttons) on the remote control. Continue to hold the button down to look at the camera screen. If the remote is working, you'll see light coming from the remote control. This means that the remote control is working, but the remote sensor on the Blu-ray player either fails or is blocked. Remove any obstacles between the Blu-ray player and the remote control and try again. If the front of the Blu-ray player is not locked, but it still does not respond to the remote control, the Blu-ray player requires maintenance. Click here to start creating the service online. How to customize codes for Samsung TV RemoteTo to set codes on your Samsung TV is a very simple and simple process. Below I'm going to share the process of how to set the codes. Just look You have to first look at the codes for Samsung Television's guide to your remote control. Then you have to press and hold the Search code button on the remote control. Then click the TV button, after which you will have to release the Code Search button. You have to take care of one thing that the red light should stay on your remoteNow you have to enter the three-digit codes from the guide in the keyboard of your remote controllf your code was valid, then the red light should turn off, and if it is not valid, then the red light will flash repeatedly. Now you have to turn on the ON TV and you have to check the remote control by clicking the Channel and Volume buttons. If all the buttons on the remote do not work, then you should repeat this process with another code from the manual or list. Depending on how the remote control is configured, the remote control can use UHF radio signals, infrared signals or both to control the receiver. However, only IR signals are used to control other equipment. IR signals travel for short distances, usually 20 feet or 7 meters they can walk up to 40 feet, and cannot pass through walls or other solid objects.
